Over 150 times in the Scriptures, the Lord bids his people to rejoice and be glad. What are we to make of this call to gladness when life is so often fraught with troubles and grief? How are we to rejoice, really and sincerely rejoice, when suffering, confusion, and injustice seem to meet us at every turn?

This spring, Women in the Woods will explore the call to gladness and rejoicing in the Christian life. What does it mean that Christian believers are called to “rejoice always”? In a world that offers empty comforts on the one hand and raging despair on the other, where shall we look for the enduring gladness which is to mark the Christian life?

Speaker

DEANNA BRIODY

Deanna grew up in New York before making a home in Western Pennsylvania, where she lives with two friends, two dogs, and several chickens. She is in the final stage of her ordination process to become an Episcopal priest. Deanna has enthusiastically facilitated retreats in PA and around the east coast. Deanna loves reading (especially anything by Jane Austen) and being outside.
